SAVVA Technical Tip

A very special tool

This tip is aimed at us oldies who:

- cannot afford to go on holiday, or who
- can afford to go on holiday but don't want to.

The tool in question is a "must have" for those of us who have a tendency to drop nuts, bolts and spanners down past the engine or other vital innards. As most of us have experienced - when things fall, two things happen:

- For some unknown reason, they disappear, never to be seen again, or
- they roll midway under the car where one has to lie flat on one's tummy to retrieve them.

It's the latter we will address, the problem of getting up and down.

Before starting on a project you should arm yourself with the special tool pictured below, commonly referred to as a "broom". When spanners, nuts and bolts etc fall down under the car one takes the broom and "sweeps" the offending item to the side of the vehicle where it can be easily retrieved. I have a friend who is a bit smarter than me and has gone one step further and developed a stick with a magnet attached to the end which enables him to retrieve the items from the floor or that are stuck halfway down the engine bay. They say 'necessity is the mother of all inventions'.
